After conclusion of the business session they will hold open house and all citizens are invited. Moving pictures of the Daly City Band, Daly City baseball team (in action and still), the American Legion National Convention and comedies will be shown.

These are excellent views and it will be well worth your while to attend and give your town a boost.

GYMNASIUM VIEW AT HIGH SCHOOL NOW ON DISPLAY

Drawings of the proposed improvements at the Jefferson Union High School have been placed on display in the windows of the Relish Bakery and the Signal Barber Shop on Mission street.

These are replicas of the new gymnasium and swimming pool which it is hoped to construct through the sale of bonds and federal aid.

All citizens should interest themselves and have a look and then go out and work to have the bond issue adopted.

REGISTER NOW IS STATE OFFICIAL PLEA TO VOTER

You Must Register This Year—Old Registration Will Not Entitle You To Vote.

Unless the 2,000,000 unregistered citizens of California start to register immediately, it is going to be physically impossible to handle the eleventh hour rush, Frank C. Jordon, secretary of state, declared at Sacramento this week in an appeal sent to the voters of the state to register now.

"Only one-third of the 3,000,000 voters of California have registered as required by the new law," Jordan stated. "This leaves approximately 2,000,000 registrations to be handled during the next five weeks. The last available day is March 26.

"It is going to be physically impossible for county clerks in many of the 58 counties to handle registrations during a last hour rush.

"The people must be informed that the so-called permanent registration book has been junked. The great register of the state is dead and the only way a citizen can vote is by re-registering.

"If he fails to do so on or before March 26 he will be disfranchised insofar as the Presidential primary election is concerned."

WHERE DO WE GO FROM HERE? GO FORWARD WITH PROGRESS

Every Citizen Should Attend The Mass Meeting At The High School Auditorium Next Tuesday Evening.

(By Maude Larue Ives)

When the Roll is Called, will you be There?

One of the most important events of the year will be the mass meeting scheduled for next Tuesday evening, March 3, in the Jefferson Union High School Auditorium.

Our Boys and Girls have sent out an SOS. As the attendance increases in our high school more room is required—classrooms, gymnasium, etc. Ways and means for financing this project will be discussed at the meeting and you will have the opportunity to see for yourself whether or not the need is justifiable.

Many of our "good neighbors" enjoy recalling events of their childhood. In fact, they believe that the boys and girls of their day found life more interesting than do the young people of this generation.

In reminiscing over his earlier years, someone recalled the river, the forest and the level fields near his home, which furnished the right environment for fishing, hunting, boating, skating, swimming, berry and nut gathering and plenty of baseball.

Because our city and rural life is becoming more and more metropolitan we must keep in line with this change and do our part in furnishing the proper equipment for athletic training in the schools, for that is where most of the time of our pupils is spent. There is no surer road to the goal of perfect health than regular exercise in the fresh outdoor air. A gymnasium furnishes a substitute

TRANSPORTATION FOR COUNTY IMPROVED

The San Mateo County Board of Supervisors on Monday authorized attendance of Supervisors Witt and Beer, District Attorney Ferrell and County Engineer Marshall at a hearing before the railroad commission regarding the application of two new bus lines that may pass through this county.

The County engineer pointed out to the supervisors the great importance of this matter owing to the fact that the traffic situation in this county would be further complicated by additional bus lines from Los Angeles to San Francisco, as requested by the Santa Fe Transportation Company and the Pickwick Bus Company. He advised that commute rates on buses should be taken up.

A VOTE FOR THE HIGH SCHOOL BONDS HELPS BUILD COMMUNITY

Citizens Should Be Willing To Forward Every Move For Educational Advancement Of Our Children.

Should the high school boys and girls of Jefferson Union High School District have the same school advantages as the boys and girls of all the other high school districts in San Mateo County?

This is the question that will be answered by the voters of Jefferson Union High School District at the school election on March 10.

The original high school buildings were designed for a student body of less than half the number of the present enrollment. Forty-five was the average daily attendance during the first year but within twelve years the average daily attendance had grown to 464—an increase of over one thousand per cent. This term the enrollment has gone over 640 and the indications are that next year it will be well over 700.

Seven years ago it was necessary to construct a shop building with two class rooms. Three years later six class rooms had to be added. This was done without any tax being levied upon the district due to the efficiency of the high school trustees in the handling of school funds. Last year a building had to be constructed for the woodworking classes, and this was done by the Smith-Hughes class in carpentering at the cost of materials only. All of the labor was performed by the boys under the supervision and instruction of the teacher.

The problem that faces the high school trustees today is to provide not only extra class rooms for the increasing enrollment, but also to

TANFORAN WILL SEE SOME OF BEST RACERS IN WEST

Winner Of First Santa Anita Handicap Will Start In Marchbank Handicap On Opening Day.

Azucar, winner of the first Santa Anita Handicap and a charging fourth in the second running of the rich event last Saturday, will be among the turf champions which come here for the Tanforan spring meeting, opening March 7.

Supporters of this big, powerful long-striding converted steeplechaser contend that he was the fastest closing horse in the Santa Anita Handicap. Blocked in the stretch mix up, his chance for victory was ruined. He was never in better form than he is right now and he's certain to be a strong contender for the $10,000 added Marchbank Handicap to be run on opening day, March 7—the main objective of his northern invasion.

Jockey George Woolf, who rode Azucar to his sensational triumph in the first Santa Anita Handicap, has been engaged to pilot him Saturday in the San Juan Capistrano Handicap, cosing features of the Santa Anita meeting. It is quite likely that Woolf will be in the boot when Azucar faces the barrier in the Marchbank Handicap at Tanforan.

VETERANS FETE HUGE SUCCESS IN AUDITORIUM

Many Notables Attend And Excellent Program Is Rendered

The fourth annual Veterans Fete was brought to a fitting close at 1:00 a. m. with the Civic Auditirium in San Francisco filled to overflowing by approximately 10,000 dancing veterans and their friends.

The fete this year had exceptional significance to the city of Daly City and its citizens through the election of George and Martha Washington and their official families. Mrs. Ethel Dorn of this city, was sponsored and endorsed by Old Glory Post No. 2044, Veterans of Foreign Wars, of Daly City. Through their efforts and the invaluable assistance of their friends, Mrs. Dorn finished second to the winner, only a scant 11,000 votes behind. The winner was in doubt until the last vote was counted.

Considering the lateness of the entry from this Post and Auxiliary exceptionally good results were obtained. Old Glory Post and Auxiliary

MRS. ETHEL DORN

No. 2044 and Daly City were ably represented in the mammoth parade held at 10:30 o'clock Saturday morning. The Post degree team with their colors and the exceptionally fine uni-

VISIONLESS FACTION HOLDS RACING BACK

By J. W. MARCHBANK

My campaign for race meetings of twenty-five days each, with the thoroughbreds moving about from track to track, is meeting with commendation everywhere. That is, everywhere except in the ranks of dividend-mad promoters; they want nothing that would build up sport. A comprehensive analysis demonstrates that long meetings, and the people conducting them, are followers of that supposedly outworn slogan:

"Every man for himself; the devil take the hindmost."

My observation over a period of years leads me to the conclusion that what is interpreted as ruthless selfishness in the marts of trade has no place on the race track. Every effort should be made to furnish entertainment of the highest kind at the least risk of pulling down the ideals connected with the sport for several centuries.

Moronic ballyhoo is no adequate substitute for a period of formful racing. In the course of time the fans see through the veneer and hanker for something approaching the "class" of short meetings in other countries. If the game is to endure a healthy interest must be encouraged; the veriest tyro will tell you that is not done by essentially cheap tactics.

The basis of the pastime, as I have said on other occasions, is the farm where the runners are bred. Realizing the truth of that position, I have been rearing winners at my Heather Farm for a number of years.

Banks, oil companies, railroad companies and other institutions have their own way of doing things. The race is another matter. Probably the best way to get good sport is to confine the operations of the tracks to breeders. A promoter has no interest in the thoroughbred as such, in many cases does not know if the horse originated in England or in Timbuctoo; a situation arises in which he can make use of his promotional inclinations, and he goes to it.

The Tanforan spring meeting begins Saturday, March 7, and it will be for 25 days.

OLD RIVALS WILL CONTEST ON HIGH SCHOOL GROUND

Home Baseball Club And Golden State Meat Team Will Play On Local Field

Next Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock one of the most interesting games is expected when the Daly City Tanforan tangle with the Golden State Meats on the Jefferson Union High School diamond here.

These teams were bitter rivals in the recently closed Recreation AA League, the last game between them having been won by the butchers by a score of 4 to 3.

Hoberg, ex State League and Cincinnati rookie, will pitch for the Golden State Meats, and Jackie Gerstenberg, who also was in the Cincinnati training camp, probably will do the heaving for the local team.

The losers of this game will have to pay for the eats and drinks to be served that evening.

DON'T FORGET!

You are invited to attend the Junior Auxiliary whist tonight (Friday) at 8 o'clock, at the American Legion Hall on San Diego avenue. Bring your friends. Admission 25 cents.

HOW ABOUT IT! WILL YOU BE ON HAND TUESDAY?

Mass Meting To Be Held At Jefferson Union High School To Discuss Improvements.

provide necessary facilities for the physical education departments of the school.

The State of California pays to each school district annually approximately $90 per pupil in average daily attendance. Thus, for last year's attendance, Jefferson Union High School receives this year over $41,000 from the State. This money is paid with the provision that the high school shall give, first, a course of instruction preparing the graduates for entrance to the university, and, secondly, a proper course in physical education to every boy and girl attending the high school.

Jefferson Union High School complies in every respect with the first requirement, and its graduates enter the State University upon the same footing as graduates of any other accredited high school in California. But it does not comply with the second requirement, namely, giving a proper course of physical education to every boy and girl enrolled in the school. It cannot do this because it has not the required facilities and equipment. The recent spell of rainy weather amply demonstrated this.

It was to meet this situation that the high school trustees called the bond election for March 10 in order that the electors of the district might vote on the question of supplying a gymnasium and equipment along with necessary class rooms. The architects have estimated that $85,000 would be sufficient to meet the requirements.

Two thoughts were in the minds of the trustees in calling the election at this time. The first one was that there would be ample time between the election and next August to have the building erected before the opening of school in the fall. The second was that there is an excellent prospect of getting from the Federal government a grant of $69,000 with which to add a swimming pool to the gymnasium equipment. This latter would be an outright gift of WPA funds by the Federal Government to the Jefferson Union High School District. Local labor would be employed to do all the work.

It is not commonly known that this project was submitted by the high school trustees to the WPA authorities, and that it has been approved in every respect by the State officials of the WPA.

If the district's share of the expense ($85,000) had been available when the project was submitted, there is every reason to believe that the grant of WPA money would have been made last fall, and the work of construction would now be going on. The trustees are informed by those directly in touch with Washington that before any grant of money will be made by the WPA the district will have to vote in favor of raising its share of the money. It is, therefore, absolutely necessary that the bond issue carry at the election on March 10 if we hope to receive this grant of money from the Federal Government.

To the taxpayers, the cost of the whole project is small. It is estimated that a tax of approximately thirty cents per year on an assessed valuation of $500 will carry the indebtedness and retire the bonds in twenty years.

In return for this, what will the district receive? In the first place, it will then have sufficient room and equipment to accommodate the large enrollment of students and to place Jefferson Union High School on an equality in this respect with the other high schools of the county. In the second place, it will make it possible for the district to have a social as well as an educational center for its youths and adults to be used in the evenings, as has every high school district in our county. With a gymnasium and swimming pool there would be opportunity in the evenings for safe and constructive recreation for our boys and girls beyond school age, as well as for adults. This could be provided through organized classes in swimming, basketball, and other recognized popular games. Such an institution in this district would be of incalculable value, as a community asset.

So the problem resolves itself not only into the question of giving to our high school boys and girls educational advantages equal to those of all the other high school districts in our county, but also into the additional question—Shall we make Jefferson Union High School District a still better place in which to rear children, where the energies of youth during leisure hours will be guided into paths that lead to character building and good citizenship, and where parents may bring their families in the assurance that this community considers the interests of childhood and youth of supreme importance.

On these issues The Record backs the high school bonds 100 per cent. The greatest advertisement the district could give itself would be to pass the bonds by an unprecedented vote in every precinct, and broadcast the news to the world.

All those whose names were on the last great register, in addition to those who registered up to within forty days of the election, will be entitled to vote on March 10.

Mrs. Dorn, who ran a close second to Mrs. Ordell Cohen for "Martha," was chosen "Abigail Smith Adams," wife of the secretary of state in the Continental Cabinet. Her partner in the pageant was Fire Chief Charles Brennan, who portrayed John Quincy Adams, secretary of state.

SMALL BLAZE

The Daly City Fire Department was called to extinguish a fire, Wednesday afternoon of this week, at Cabin No. 1, Mission Auto Camp, caused by a pan of water being left on top of an automatic water heater when ociupants of the cabin left the premises.

MAN ROBBED AND BEATEN ON RIDE WITH STRANGER

Meets Casual Acquaintances And Thrown From Car Here On Trip To San Jose.

A San Francisco man was robbed and beaten and thrown from a speeding automobile by three men with whom he was taking a ride to San Jose early last Sunday morning.

Victor Burton, 27, a carpet cutter of California street, was found lying in the street by officers Dalton and Kusber as they were paroling the city near 150 Moltke street at that time.

The unconscious victim was removed to the Villa Sanatorium for treatment. He was bleeding about the face and head.

Several hours later he told hospital attendants he had gone to the Trianon Dance Hall on Sutter street, in San Francisco, last Saturday evening with Phil Fink, with whom he resides on California street. The two friends became separated. The trio who beat up Burton in the auto and robbed him of $5 asked him if he wanted to go for a ride to San Jose with them. Burton, who had been drinking, told police he believed the men had given him knock out drops.

A flaring panel, as fashion dictates, features an otherwise simple skirt which is dart-fitted at the back and a novelty belt adds a finishing touch.

Fashioned of soft silk, printed or plain, in amber or green or the always fashionable black, this striking all-occasion frock will add zest to your winter wardrobe and see you through the coming spring. It will wear well under a wrap and appear doubly attractive when the wrap or coat is removed.

Women More Vicious Than Men, Says J. Edgar Hoover

Take it from no less an authority than J. Edgar Hoover, director of the federal bureau of investigation, the female of the species is more deadly than the male. That is, women are more to be feared than men. Especially does this hold true where criminals are concerned. Women criminals, he asserts, excel in the will to kill. Statistics kept by the bureau of investigation reveal that the percentage of women charged with crimes of violence is greater than similar offenses charged to men. Although only 6.9 per cent of the persons arrested in the United States in October were women, these women showed a greater tendency toward murder than all the males arrested.—Pathfinder Magazine.

THE PUBLIC VOICE

Opinions Of Citizens For Which The Editor Gives No Sponsorship

READ THE FACTS

Following are excerpts from a two column article which appeared in the Daly City Record of September 16, 1927, written by C. F. Rodenberger.

Believes Daly City Should Have Modern Paid Fire Department

"Within the last five years Daly City, like numerous other cities, has grown by leaps and bounds, and today this community boasts a population of 9000 inhabitants. . . . The investments which the citizens have made in these homes should be protected from loss by fire. . . . Today the property owners do not enjoy that service . . . because of the delay in getting the aparatus to the fire. . . . With this thought in mind the writer, who served as a volunteer fireman in this city for the past eleven years . . . wishes at this time to outline a program for proper fire protection. . . . Therefore I submit the following: The present city ordinance, creating a fire department, should be supplemented by a new ordinance creating a fire department, consisting of one chief, one assistant chief, one fire marshal and fourteen firemen, all of whom should be known as call men, and three drivers. The duties of the drivers are to live in the firehouse. . . . All firemen should be compensated for service rendered, to-wit: Drivers should receive $180 per month. Call men to receive $2 for every fire attended and $1 for false alarms or grass fires . . . . The salaries for the firemen would be paid by the councilmen. . . . Sincerely hoping that the Daly City Fire Department will keep pace with the fast growing city."

Respectfully submitted,
C. F. RODENBERGER,
President, Associated Firemen of San Mateo County; Member of Company No. 5, Daly City.

Comment: The foregoing article does not sound as if Mr. Rodenberger is trying to hinder the welfare of the firemen. That was a progressive thought in 1927 and is more so today. Mr. Smith stated that my proposal called for sixteen salaried men; the truth is that I asked for three salaried men. Smith must have used that miracle pencil with four points—"one point for you and three points for me"—when he compiled that figure that ran into the hundreds of thousands.

I call your attention to that time worn phrase as used by Mr. Smith for the past eight years, namely, "with this thought in mind." It is used in the foregoing article and was coined by the writer and Smith copied it later.

Mr. Smith bitterly opposed paying the firemen for their services stating at the time that the city had no money for the firemen and besides he objected on the grounds that it did not look well to have three firemen, on salary, to bum around in the fire house. But it looks well for Smith to have three policemen growing roots on chairs in the city hall. The fact is that Mr. Smith, according to his past record in firemen's welfare, never was for the firemen and is not today—witness, according to the circular distributed by the firemen, the city council passed an ordinance placing city employes under civil service, but the firemen were left out. When Smith sheds crocodile tears over the poor firemen's lot, just put that down as a plain "boloney."

When a city with a population of 10,000 can pay salaries for eight policemen, but cannot find a dime for salaried firemen, then there is something wrong and I blame Peabody Smith, the "champion" of firemen's rights. Firemen, ask yourselves, why were you forgotten, why do you have to battle for recognition of your services when other departments get what they want? The costs to the taxpayers for your services are repaid in reduced insurance rates. I repeat again, I have no fault to find in placing the firemen under civil service.

C. F. RODENBERGER,
Daly City, Calif.

IT APPEARS TO ME

There are quite a number of administration followers trying to convince the public that Mr. Rodenberger is opposed to having the firemen placed under civil service, apparently because of a public statement he made condemning the method used to achieve such benefits for the firemen. The method of attack, shady as it is, is unbecoming the dignity of the chairman of the board, Mr. Smith, and of the officers of the fire department. Of course there is some excuse for the chairman of the board, because he and I are old time pals—a pal in need is a pal indeed until some one upsets the apple cart.

But I cannot understand why the chief of the fire department, Mr. Chesney, that "redblooded fighting fireman" who only two years ago made this statement: "If the council does not give the money—then, to hell with the mayor; I will put the matter on the ballot." And today we find this chief, with his cap in his hand, mildly asking the council to please include the firemen in the civil service ordinance. It appears to me that this is a great departure from the attitude of the Andy of two years ago. Evidently his blood is thinning due to untiring efforts in again beating a path to the lumber yard. Why pick on me, Andy, when some fifteen red blooded firemen signed the petition? Why all the coincident meetings; in other words, a packed meeting, for an underhanded purpose? Why is Andy afraid to put this question on the ballot?

DALY CITY ROD AND GUN CLUB

(By "Bill" Grantham)

The Daly City Rod and Gun Club held its regular monthly meeting last Friday, February 21. Considerable plans were discussed for the ensuing year.By-laws were adopted; club emblem, which consists of a gold gun and rod, crossed on a blue field was also decided upon and bids asked for furnishing some. It was also resolved at this meeting to sponsor a Boys Junior Club, instructing the boys in game conservation, the care and handling of guns and fishing tackle and instruction in the use of these. It is hoped by this instruction to make our youth conscious of the worth of our conservation of game and to give them the skill to handle themselves when afield.

None will deny the benefits derived from the outdoor life, which builds both strong bodies and minds, not to mention patience and tolerance which goes hand in hand with good sportsmanship.

When these boys arrive at the legal hunting and fishing age their parents can be proud of them, as they will be well grounded in the clean way of living. We Dads will have to look to our laurels (if any) when these boys attain their majority.

Fishing over the last week end just was not on the boards.

Louis Biancchini and Gene Peterson made a trip to Point Arena, Garcia, Gualala and Russian Rivers. All rivers and creeks were flooded and of course, very muddy. The party left Friday and scouted Saturday and Sunday and neither caught or saw a fish of any kind on the trip.

These are dark days for the fishermen, but what a break the fish are having—or are they?

Don't forget the meeting night, the third Friday of every month, Eagles Hall, Daly City.

VISIT YOSEMITE

Mr. and Mrs. J. Cunningham of Miriam street, Mr. and Mrs. E. Hamilton and Mr. and Mrs. J. Bergin Jr. of San Francisco, motored to Yosemite Valley, early Saturday morning, returning home Sunday evening.

DOES NOT LIKE COUNCIL ACTION ON FIREWORKS

A post card has been received by a large number of Daly City merchants and some officials regarding recent activities by city employes. card is signed by A. J. Guisti and This card is signed by A. J. Guisti and reads as follows:

"Dear friend merchant and voter:

This is to tell you that certain employes of the city and persons connected with the H. H. administration are endeavoring to have you sign certain cards or paper to have your names eliminated if you have signed the Civil Service petition.

Let's have it on the ballot.

Let's give Mr. H. H. the same answer he gave us on the fireworks. Have you forgotten the way the Dictator and Kingfish of Daly City treated us on the fireworks?

How he passed the steam roller on the fireworks?

Are you going to let H. H. get away with this ordinance too?

Let's give him back some of his own medicine. Don't be a fool."

WEEKLY BULLETIN

FIRE PREVENTION

By Chief A. P. Chesney

Bricks used for chimneys should always be laid flat, and not on edge, the latter method resulting in a weak structure having a tendency to develop cracks, through which sparks may escape.

It is also the custom in some parts of the country to support chimnevs on the timber construction of the building, or to hang them on brackets, and both practices are extremely hazardous.

The Fire Marshal's Department of Michigan reports the case of a man who perhaps has not yet ceased to regret his inattention to a defective chimney in a house he owned. The local fire chief had detected the hazardous chimney, which was lined with sewer tile (a material incapable of withstanding wide fluctuations in temperature) instead of fire clay, and had ordered its removal. The owner was lax in attending to the matter, however, and the house burned to the ground with a loss of $6200 and insurance of only $2100.

LESSON SERMON OF CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"Christ Jesus" will be the subject of the Lesson-Sermon Sunday, March 1, in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass.

The Golden Text will be: "Unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given: and the government shall be upon his shoulder" (Isa. 9: 6). Other Bible citations will include: "And they entered in, and found not the body of the Lord Jesus. And it came to pass, as they were much perplexed thereabout, behold, two men stood by them in shining garments: And as they were afraid, and bowed down their faces to the earth, they said unto them, Why seek ye the living among the dead? He is not here, but is risen:" (Luke 24: 3-6 to :).

The Lesson-Sermon will also include the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "The resurrection of the great demonstrator of God's power was the proof of his final triumph over body and matter, and gave full evidence of divine Science,—evidence so important to mortals. The belief that man has existence or mind separate from God is a dying error. This error Jesus met with divine Science and proved its nothingness" (p. 42).

RELIGION IN THE NEWS

(By Rev. Miles Dawson)

New York's Supreme Court Justice William T. Collins recently upheld the singing of hymns and the reading of the Bible in the public schoils, and the occasional use of school buildings by religious groups. In taking his stand for this custom which is old and sacred to the early Americans, he quoted from an earlier Massachusetts decision:

The Bible has long been in our common schools.

. . . It was placed there as the book best adapted from which to teach children and youth the principles of piety and justice, a sacred regard for truth, love of their country, humanity and a universal benevolence, sobriety, moderation, and temperance.

. . . The teacher enters into no argument and gives no instruction in theology from it.

Among the pleasant memories of my father's boyhood days is the fragrant memory of learning Bible verses in the little old Scotch schoolhouse. From time to time today we read of teachers in our public schools being reproved for atheistic teaching, and for un-American doctrine, but why not bring back the reading of the Book upon which this great nation, the Christian nation (?), was built? As I am led to understand, the law of this state of ours permits the reading of the Bible, without comment, in the schools, and we should see to it that those teachers who desire this privileges are granted it, and are not abused when the privilege is taken.

As a minister of the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ, I favor a plebiscite on this great and important question, which I am sure will have much to do with the remedying of the vice and crime which today is sweeping our country. If crime is due to depression, as so many want us to believe, what could be a finer solution than to bring daily into young lives the comfort and normal strength that comes from ahe reading of the scriptures?

INTELLIGENT STUDY SHOWS "CHIEF" RIGHT

By J. W. MARCHBANK
Pioneer in Frontier Mining Work

Discussing the present political situation in a good-natured, bantering way, Alma Gluck, the singer, knocks the props from under the attack of the enemies of the national administration. She knows more than a little about the game of politics and went on the stump for Al Smith when Smith ran for President.

Miss Gluck has a faculty for putting over her points in a persuasive manner. In a letter to a New York daily she writes:

When I learned that this great Mother America, who so generously adopted me when I came a beggar to her door, was ill and so seriously that a transfusion was necessary, I serenely and even cheerfully submitted to being bled through taxation and got quite a kick out of it. I was completely happy and wallowed in virtue; had even designed an evening gown for myself of white satin, with a cape of marine blue with forty-nine stars rampant and a sash of striped red and white. At this point a strange phenomenon appeared.

During the last two years I began getting extra dividends and favors from the companies in which I was a stock holder.

Then I thought, if by "recklessly spending" and "squandering" the money the administration was taking away from me in taxes it was spreading it thinly among millions of customers who buy the commodities sold by the companies in which I hold stock and I get it or even a fraction of it back in dividends, then I'm not making such a noble sacrifice as I thought I was, and I had better not clothe myself in that evening gown yet.

On all sides I heard the same song: "reckless spending," "squandering," and "balanced budget" ad nauseam, but no concrete plan; no light anywhere. Then I heard my beloved Al Smith was going to speak and all my doubts left me and I waited confidently.

At least I heard him. My lion came in such a lamb my heart sank, but I waited patiently until he should get into his stride. What was his stride? No voice in the wilderness—no concrete plan, just a bleating of the same old theme song about reckless spending, balanced budget, etc., and I wept.

President Roosevelt, our chief, made some worthwhile remarks at Temple University last Saturday. His address was in response to that of the president of the Philadelphia institution in conferring upon the national leader the degree of doctor of jurisprudence.

The president declared he was proud to be head of a government that has sought to make a substantial contribution to the cause of education, even in a period of economic distress.

Since 1933 the federal government has made, through the various governmental agencies of the administration, allotments to local communities for schools, colleges and library buildings amounting to more than $400,000,000.

Postmaster General James A. Farley has come along with the suggestion that the so-called American Liberty League should be called the "American Cellophane League." He stated the other night at Topeka, Kansas, an editorial writer had so labeled the organization for two reasons, because it is a "Dupont product" and because "you can see right through it."

Farley said no matter who the Republican party nominee for president may be, the reactionaries are determined to control the party's course.

Much enthusiasm was aroused when the speaker pointed out that Franklin D. Roisevelt had done more than save America in vindicating democracy at a time when all over the world it's enemies were ready to declare the death of the finest system of government ever devised by man.

CHILD CELEBRATES FIFTH BIRTHDAY

Shirley Zerga of 1064 Brunswick street celebrated her fifth birthday on February 22.

The table was prettily decorated in red, white and blue with favors to match. A large birthday cake adorned the center of the table, with a George Washington hatchet placed in the middle.

Those who helped the little Miss make merry on this occasion were: Janet and Art Reynor, Joan Manning, Joey Wood and Billy Kidd all of San Francisco, Joan Romiguere, Stanley and Corinne Parmisano, Gloria, Jeanne and Joseph Bacigalupi, Marie and Arlene Reardon, Geraldine and Albert Parmisano, Adele Lafayette, Gloria Parmisano, Sonny Johnston and Barbara Zerga.

MARX BROTHERS IN COMEDY RIOT AT LOCAL HOUSE

Most Uproarious Picture Ever To Come Out Of Hollywood — Singing Of Kitty Carlisle Adds To Entertainment.

Those Merry Madcaps, the Marx Brothers—Groucho, Chico and Harpo—spent two years in preparation for the filming of their latest comedy, "A Night at the Opera," which will be shown at the Daly City Theater, Sunday and Monday, March 1 and 2.

It was worth waiting for!

Here is a picture that is not only tops for the screamingly funny comedy you would expect from the Marx Brothers, but one that is built around an intriguing plot, an interesting story and some truly brilliant singing by two Broadway stage favorites, Kitty Carlisle and Allan Jones.

"The Marx Brothers in "A Night at the Opera"

The action romps along at a sprightly pace as Groucho, Chico and Harpo go into the grand opera business in Italy, dash across the Atlantic and stage an opera in New York that has the city on its ear.

Supporting the Marxes, in addition to Jones and Miss Carlisle, who are perfectly cast as the young lovers, are Walter King, who also has a fine singing role, Siegfried Rumann, Margaret Dumont, Edward Keane and Robert Emmet O'Connor.

Sam Wood, who has directed more than forty feature films, must be credited with a job well done.

The second attraction will be "Escape From Devil's Island," with Victor Jory and Florence Rice.

Sunday—Paul's Amateur Show.

Tuesday and Saturday are Bank Nights.

A new 1936 model automobile will be given away by the Daly City Theater on Friday night, March 6.

CROCKER P. T. A. STUDY CIRCLE

The Study Group of Crocker P. T. A. held a luncheon meeting at the home of Mrs. Ruby Katch, Tuesday of last week. After luncheon Mrs. Orvilla D. Pauw, chairman of the Study Group, conducted the class in the "Care and Preservation of Home Furnishing." This was a continuation of the former classes in Consumer Education. After the class a general discussion was held relative to the care, price and quality of various articles needed by the busy housewife and P. T. A. worker. On adjournment of the meeting all present voted it a pleasant and instructive afternoon. Those present were Mesdames Bernadine Lewis, Orvilla D. Pauw, Nora Clifton, Agnes Anderson, Marie Gaitor, Lillian Cavagnaro, Julia V. Jordan.

The next Study Group and executive meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Nora Clifton, 147 Winchester street on Monday, March 2. All members of Crocker are invited to attend and bring any problem you wish to discuss with the group.

A number of members representing Crocker motored to the Sequoia High School, at Redwood City, to attend the Founders Day meeting of the Seventeenth District, Friday of last week. Those attending were the president, Mrs. Bernadine Lewis; Mrs. Gertrude Walker, thrift chairman of the district; Mrs. Lillian G. Landini, and Mesdames Julia V. Jordan, Ruby Katch, Orvilla D. Pauw, Lillian Cavagnaro and Nellie Caine.

Attend the Mass Meeting at the High School next Tuesday evening, March 3.

HISTORY AND SMITH FAMILY BOTH REPEATS

The Latter Lead All The Rest In The Current Telephone Book

History repeats, and so do the Smiths, at least in the telephone directory.

The latest proof of this was seen in the green-covered March book, delivery of which was begun Monday of this week by the telephone company. The new book shows the Smiths won again in having the largest number of listings, just as they have for years and years.

But the Smiths haven't always led. They didn't in 1878. Perhaps that was because there was no history to repeat, for the directory of that year was the first to be issued here. Anyway, there was no Smith, Brown, Anderson, Johnson, Jones, or any other "popular" name, among its 174 entries.

The numerical supremacy of Smith, in local telephone lists goes back at least to 1897, when that name appeared 54 times. Brown was second in that year with 35, and then came Wilson, Davis, Miller Johnson and Jones.

San Francisco's new directory contains ten columns of Smiths, in the plain spelling, who did not need the aid of variations such as Schmidt, Schmitt, Smythe, Smyth, etc., to score a decisive victory.

People named Johnson find themselves second to people named Smith as space takers, with a total of eight columns.

Delivery of approximately 252,000 telephone books will be completed here this week.

Compared with the previous edition, the March directiry for San Francisco and bay counties is 24 pages thicker, and contains an added 7740 "white-page" listings, of which more than 3400 are credited to San Francisco, according to Lyle M. Brown, division manager of the telephone company.

Ask Your Doctor and Find Out

Don't Entrust Your Own or Your Family's Well - Being to Unknown Preparations

THE person to ask whether the preparation you or your family are taking for the relief of headaches is SAFE to use regularly is your family doctor. Ask him particularly about Genuine BAYER ASPIRIN.

He will tell you that before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin most "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as bad for the stomach and, often, for the heart. Which is food for thought if you seek quick, safe relief.

Scientists rate Bayer Aspirin among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and the pains of rheumatism, neuritis and neuralgia. And the experience of millions of users has proved it safe for the average person to use regularly. In your own interest remember this.

You can get Genuine Bayer Aspirin at any drug store — simply by asking for it by its full name, BAYER ASPIRIN. Make it a point to do this — and see that you get what you want.

CHAPTER IX

Murder.

In the morning Garth for the first time showed haste. The dawn was far too beautifully rose. He made sure that Lilith's blankets were back in her cockpit before he handed her aboard. He fitted the glass wind cowl to the cockpit rim, which came up almost level with her eyes.

"If we strike into a blizzard, get your cap over your ears, and blanket yourself, head and all," he warned. "You don't want to lose your ears and nose."

The constable was already snug under his own cowl. Garth swung into his pilot cockpit. Old Tobin gave the propeller a spin for him.

This time Garth needed no circling in order to trace the air route. Aboard the cabin monoplane he had watched Huxby's instruments and noted the landmarks from above. He now knew the way in by air. He did not even have to follow the zigzag course that he had been forced to grope along in guiding Huxby. His mental map of all those turns, bearings and distances enabled him to draw a direct air line to the lost valley. He headed along it as straight as the crow flies.

By the time the lovely rose dawn glared into an angry red sunrise, the roaring plane had flown all the way across that weary desolation of muskegs and broken-ridged lower mountains. Close ahead loomed the last range in front of the Selwyns. The summits that had reared up so bare and brown under the summer sun now gleamed with a white mantle. The only dark spots were precipices too steep to hold the snow.

Thickening clouds foretold another storm. But Garth had outraced it. Instead of swinging in around the outthrust mountain to the pass, he banked and drove past the east side of the mountain, on a long upslant.

A few miles north from the pass, he banked to the west and headed for the lowest notch in the jagged eastside wall of the valley. Above the great barrier the plane bumped like a boat in a choppy seat.

Garth paid no conscious heed to the rough passage. His hands and feet adjusted the controls with automatic precision, leaving his attention free to center upon what lay ahead.

His first glimpse into the valley showed him a column of smoke above the black belt of spruce at the far end of the lake. Much thicker and darker than ordinary camp-fire smoke, it stood out distinct against the vivid white of the snow-sheeted tundra slope.

As the plane drove clear above the saddle between the peaks, he shoved the stick forward and cut the gun. With the roar of the engine stilled, the plane swooped down at the lake like a monstrous bird of prey. Relatively speaking, it was driving at its quarry as noiselessly as a great horned owl of the North stoops to strike a rabbit. Also, by entering the valley over this distant saddle, instead of through the pass, Garth felt sure the plane would not be seen.

His next problem was to effect a landing without the roar of the restarted motor. He had already made out Huxby's big cabin plane, moored at the mouth of the glacier stream. That was the only safe mooring place.

The lake had already skimmed over with thin ice except where the outrushing glacier torrent kept a water lane free, well out from shore. Huxby undoubtedly had been shrewd enough to foresee a freeze-up if he moored his plane below the foot of the placer trough.

Absence of any smoke near the plane told that the miners were camped at the placer. The stream mouth was too far from the diggings for the hurried workers to tramp back and forth every night and morning. Besides, there would be snowdrifts to wade through.

From every indication, the claimjumper could be surprised and taken before he realized that any other party than his own had come to the valley. The one need was to avoid using the plane's engine. Its roar would be heard for miles.

Garth calculated the volplane angle with his utmost skill. If he hit the water too soon, the propeller would have to be used to pull the plane in to the landing; if he held on too long, there might be a crackup.

It was a matter of fractions of seconds. He allowed for the fact that the slight wind was abeam, instead of sucking down from the glacier. His one failure was to notice in time the shrunken volume of the glacier stream.

The plane took to the water smoothly, at almost the exact distance offshore that he had planned. The difficulty was that the outswirling current lacked the force he expected. Instead of slowing down or stopping short, the three-seater drove in hard at the cabin plane.

The stream mouth lacked width enough for the small plane to squeeze past the large one. Nor was there room to maneuver between the offshore rocks. Garth acted with instant decision. He swerved the three-seater to clear the tail of the cabin plane. As he stripped off his goggles and swung down from his cockpit with the mooring line, the pontoon stems smashed like eggshells on a waterworn rock, across the narrow channel from the tail of the other plane.

Before the current could float the three-seater back into deep water, Garth leaped ashore. Lilith had opened the cowl of her cockpit and was starting to climb out. Garth glanced at the threatening sky.

"She has settled down hard and fast, Miss Ramill. Better stay snug aboard until we return."

The girl's reply was to scramble forward on the shoreward wing of the plane. Garth waded out in the icy water and had her hand down his rifle, the three pairs of snowshoes, and all the blankets. He tossed everything to Dillon, then took the girl on his shoulder.

The policeman had started upstream with the outfit. He walked across the now shallow ford without getting a drop of water over the tops of his heavily greased shoepacks. Garth slung Lilith on his shoulder like a sack of meal and splashed across after Dillon.

At the far bank Dillon stopped to put on a pair of snowshoes. Garth lowered the girl upon a bare rock, and ran down the left bank to swing aboard the cabin plane. With him he took the blankets. When he came ashore, he had on dry socks and moccasins.

He frowned at Lilith. She was flopping awkwardly along on snowshoes behind the policeman.

"Take off those webs and get into the cabin," he ordered.

"I will not," she refused. "I'm going with you. I came to see that beast arrested."

"Don't be a fool. We'll be there and back before you've more than got started. There's no time to wait for you. Blizzard may swoop down any minute."

He had slipped on the third pair of snowshoes. He took his rifle from Dillon and started off as guide. The constable followed at the same rapid gait. He was an experienced snowshoe runner. Lilith tried to imitate their deft swinging stride with the webs. She tripped and plunged face-down into a drift.

Instead of turning back at the girl's cry of appeal, Garth quickened his stride to a run. A severe blizzard would thicken the skim ice and close the water lane out from the stream mouth. That would mean a wait until the stream ran dry with the freeze-up of the glacier. Not until then would the lake ice become thick enough for the cabin plane's pontoons to be chopped free and pried up on the surface.

Above the site of his old camp Garth halted and signed for his companion to listen. Down through the snowy stillness came a clear ring of metal on metal.

"They're drilling below the frost-line to blast a shaft," he said. "Richer gravel on bedrock, at the foot of the placer trough."

Dillon forged into the lead. "You'll trail me now, sir."

Without any protest, Garth fell in behind. The Law was now in command. A few strides brought them to the dyke of igneous rock that walled the lower end of the placer trough. From behind a stunted spruce, they peered across the treeless width of rock to where a large fire was flaming at the edge of the matted timberline scrub.

Over the fire hung three big iron kettles. Beside it stood a small cradle for rocking gravel. But there was no one working the rocker, nor was there anyone in sight. Even the ring of sledge on drill in the newly dug pit, just beyond the fire, had ceased.

"Not so good," Garth murmured. "I'm not so sure it's a surprise."

"You'll stay here, sir."

"No."

Constable Dillon spoke with cool logic: "If it's a surprise, I need no assistance. If he is warned and prepared to resist, better for you to support me from cover."

"Well—perhaps."

"The only way, sir. You stood responsible for bringing the young lady."

That clinched the argument against Garth. Having brought the willful girl with him, he now had to look out for her.

"Very well, Dillon," he agreed. "Wait till I take position."

He shifted to the left side of the stunted spruce and crouched down where he could peer between the lower branches. At the other side, the constable stood up and stepped out into the open. Hardly was he clear of cover when a harsh shout came from the scrub beside the fire:

"Halt! Throw up your hands."

Garth caught the menace in Huxby's voice, and leveled his rifle. There was nothing of the four-flusher about the engineer. He was a coldblooded killer.

Constable Dillon paused. But he did not put up his hands. The Northwest police do not surrender. Dillon merely swung the barrel of his carbine backward under his arm, and made quiet reply:

"I have here a warrant for the arrest of Vivian Huxby for theft and assault to murder. Any persons who interfere with his arrest will make themselves liable."

"Bah, you cock-capped red jay, you can't bluff me," Huxby gibed. "You're covered. Move, and you get a bullet through you. Drop that gun and shove up your hands."

A sideward jumping down-thrown would have put the constable back in cover. But he was a member of the Northwest mounted police. Retreat could no more be considered by him than surrender. Also, he had no authority to shoot his man. The warrant called only for the arrest of the accused. He had to do his duty at whatever risk.

"You will be well advised not to resist," he said.

With that, he raised his right snowshoe and slid it up a low cross-drift in a forward step. As he bent forward to bring up the other web, a rifle roared in the dense scrub.

Garth fired into the faint haze-puff of smokeless powder. Back came a bullet that clipped a branch at his left elbow. He shifted sideways towards the tree trunk, and rose to peer through a higher opening. A slight movement of a spruce spray in the scrub brought his rifle to his shoulder. He paused a moment to peer over the sights, his finger kissing the trigger.

Another twitch of that spruce twig. His finger tightened on the trigger—Crash! He hurled down on his right side. The first thought that flashed into his mind was that his rifle had burst. His right arm had gone numb as if broken by the shock.

Luckily, he did not at once try to spring up. As he paused to feel at the numb arm with his left hand, the bark flew from a limb close over his head. The scar of white wood showed that the bullet had been fired from off to his left.

He flattened down and crawled into the snowless hollow alongside the tree trunk. In the hollow lay his rifle. It had not burst. But that was no consolation. The first shot from off to the left had struck square against the side of the breech and smashed the magazine.

One look at the weapon showed that it was ruined. He wormed past it to the far side of the tree trunk. During all the many seconds that had passed since the firing of the first shot, he had heard no call nor any sound whatever from Constable Dillon. He peered out under the low drooped spruce boughs on that side of the tree.

As he expected, the worst had happened. The policeman lay on his back. He had been shot through the heart. One glance told Garth the fact that his companion was beyond all aid.

He looked for the constable's carbine. It was nowhere in sight. The low drift behind which Dillon had fallen gave Garth enough cover to crawl out beside the body. But the carbine was not under its owner.

Garth pulled the snowshoes from the feet of the dead man. On the heel of one web he perched the constable's cap. He reached out sideways and lifted the cap so that it peeped above the top of the drift. The cap flipped back off the snowshoe, pierced through by a bullet from the scrub beside the fire.

At the roar of the shot, Garth bobbed up, three feet to the left, to look for the missing carbine. It lay half buried in the snow, a long 10 feet away. When shot, Dillon must have flung out his hands as he pitched over backwards. In the midst of the convulsive jerk, death had loosened his grip on the carbine.

Huxby had proved he could shoot a rifle with deadly accuracy, and his men were nearly as expert. To make a dash for the carbine would be equivalent to committing suicide. To lie quiet would give the killers time to realize there was no rifle waiting to meet their attack. The fourth man might already be circling to creep in from the rear.

With his knife Garth slashed out the webs of Dillon's snowshoes. Then, worming his way backwards, he started to drag the body downslope. The tree put him under cover from the two killers near the fire. A drift enabled him to crawl to another tree without being seen by the man off to the left.

A sideward shift brought him to the shallow channel of the frozen spring rill. Down the channel a few yards, an up-jut of rock offered a complete cover. He swung the body of the constable across his shoulders, stepped into his snowshoes, and ran aslant downslope.

Every few seconds that passed without the roar of a rifle behind him, meant a widened margin of safety. The pursuers must have failed to notice his broken rifle in under the spruce, or else they thought he was hiding in the rill channel, waiting for them to come within range of the constable's service pistol.

Whatever the cause of their delay, he had gained a long start before more yells told him they had cut his trail. At the outburst, Garth eased off a little on the desperate speed of his running.

His fast mushing had already covered three-fourths of the distance to the stream. It was now a simple matter of running on to increase his handicap over the killers. Only a little time would be needed to cast free the cabin plane. As she drifted out in the current, the cross-wind would swing her around. Then a quick run out the water lane, and the take-off—

Close ahead, he caught sight of Lilith Ramill. She was sitting on her snowshoes. Her right foot was drawn up on her left knee, and she was rubbing hard at the ankle.

At sight of the limp body on Garth's shoulders, she started up, horrified. "Oh, oh, Alan! Is—is he—hurt?"

"Murdered. And you—G—d!—you here, all this way from the plane. Rifle gone. They're coming. Get up—go back."

"Coming!" she cried. "That murderer! He'll kill you too! Go on, Alan. Hurry. I'll follow."

She turned around on her right foot without a wince or groan, and bent to slip her moccasins under the toe thongs of the snowshoes. Deceived into thinking her sprain not serious, Garth slued around her and ran on at his best gait. He would get the body of Constable Dillon aboard the plane, and mush back for the girl. If she followed even at an ordinary walking pace, there might yet be time to get away.

Ellis Island Once Gay, and Named Oyster Island

In the days when New York was a Dutch possession and known as New Amsterdam—in the Seventeenth century—Ellis island, the famous immigrant station, was called Oyster Island, and was a "gay and exclusive resort."

"For almost 150 years Oyster island continued to be New Amsterdam's favorite resort for picnics, oyster roasts, clam bakes, and fishing parties," says Edward Corsi, former United States commissioner of immigration at Ellis island in his valuable book "In the Shadow of Liberty: The Chronicle of Ellis Island." "It passed finally into the hands of Samuel Ellis, a farmer of Bergen county, New Jersey.

"It later became the property of the state of New York (how, not clear) and in 1808, New York ceded the island to the federal government. It was then used as a powder magazine and arsenal and after various uses by the government, in 1890, it was designated as an immigrant station."

Mr. Corsi notes that during his administration—in 1932—"I was to witness the actual changing of the tide, the first in more than a hundred years, when more people had left our shores than were arriving. The changing tide of immigration was brought about by the depression."

In that year—1932—35,576 persons were admitted, while 103,295 left. In 1928 the figures were: admitted, 307,-255; left, 77,457.—Kansas City Star.

Nova Scotia Is Scottish

Nova Scotia, the land of Longfellow's "Evangeline" and popularly believed because of that poem to be largely French and English, is largely Scotch. The opening of Nova Scotia's parliament is accompanied by the skirl of bagpipes, and several newspapers are printed partly in Gaelic. In the Nova Scotian county of Inverness, 72 per cent of the inhabitants speak Gaelic, while less than half of the similarly named county in Scotland can speak that ancient tongue.

Latent Rabies

The length of time during which the virus of rabies may remain latent in the human body before manifesting itself is very remarkable, extreme instances showing a delay of a year. From 20 to 60 days is the usual period of time between the infection and the outbreak (incubation period).

PROTECTION OF BEACHES OBJECT OF NEW MOVE

Association Adopts Resolutions To Memorialize Congress Of United States.

The movement initiated by the Board of Supervisors of Los Angeles county to obtain a Congressional appropriation of $100,000 or more for a survey of erosion conditions along the California coast, the money to be expended by the War Department, has brought similar action by Boards of Supervisors of thirteen other counties, with more expected to follow.

This is the announcement of California Beaches Association, Statewide non-profit body, formed to cooperate the efforts of all groups interested in presenting our state's recreational sea frontage. It was through representations made by the association that northern counties joined those in the southern part of the state in memorializing Congress.

Counties that have adopted resolutions of request for an adequate federal fund for the survey are San Francisco, Sonoma, San Mateo, Santa Clara ,Butte, San Joaquin, Stanislaus, Monterey, San Luis Obispo, Santa Barbara, Ventura, Los Angeles, Orange and San Diego. The fact that three of these counties are at considerable distance from the ocean is considered significant of the wide interest that has been aroused in beach protection.

All of the resolutions have been forwarded to Washington, and will be urged before Congress by the entire California delegation. Senator Johnson already has telegraphed his approval of the movement.

Roosevelt and Congressman John J. McGrath were endorsed for re-election and the following resolution was adopted:

Whereas, the administration of President Franklin D. Roosevelt has proven itself to be wholeheartedly the champion of the cause of true Jefferson Democracy, and

Whereas, selfish private interests are seeking to undermine the confidence of the American people in their government by suggesting discord and lesions exist within the ranks of the Democratic party, and

Whereas, it is to the best interests of the voters at large that indisputable proof be given of the solidarity of the Democratic party, both as to its confidence in and loyalty to the President and its determination to maintain unaltered the present Democratic administration; now, then

Be it resolved, that we, the members of the Eighth Congressional democratic committee, hereby endorse President Franklin D. Roosevelt, together with Vice President Garner and Congressman John J. McGrath for re-election to their respective offices.

W.; Department Quartermaster Gavin, V. F. W.; Edward J. Neron, Past Department Commander V. F. W.; W. E. Pitschke, editor and publisher Daly City Record, and J. J. WHERE DO WE GO FROM HERE? LET'S GO FORWARD for the outdoors during stormy weather and a place for continuation classes for regular students and adult citizens as well.

Every Citizen Should Attend The Mass Meeting At The High School Auditorium Next Tuesday Evening.

Every boy and girl should have a thorough knowledge of at least one sport or recreation, such as baseball, football, basketball, hockey, tennis, golf, swimming or horseback riding. Athletic games stir up the blood, develop the muscles, clear the head, stimulate the appetite; in fact, they aid in building strong and healthy bodies. Moreover, engaging with others in wholesome sports helps one to overcome many undesirable traits of character—as, for example, lack of consideration, timidity, laziness, etc. Supervised athletics, with a gymnasium and all the required equipment, gives every pupil, either strong or weak, an even break—a chance to develop. An athletic instructor studies the individual needs of the members of his class and every pupil must temper his enthusiasm by the limits of his physical endurance. Rain or shine, there is an opportunity for daily practice.

Do we still possess the spirit of our forefathers? Like them, are we building for ourselves and our posterity? Great improvement has been made along educational lines since the Civil War. We must keep in step with progress. Our boys and girls are depending on our co-operation. So. let's all attend the mass meeting next Tuesday, March 3, at the High School.

All the matters pertaining to the proposed improvements will be thiroughly explained by competent speakers.

Plans and specifications have been prepared and may be viewed by all citizens who care to do so, at the High School.

Attend the Mass Meeting at the High School next Tuesday evening, March 3.
